

Women In Logistics

Sara AlHammadi

“My name is Sara AlHammadi. I joined DP World in 2018, specifically in the Health, Safety and Environment department. In the beginning, I was one of the trainees of the Ruwad Training Programme.

In this program, we form the basic skills required in our field of work. Health, safety and the environment are an integral part of the daily operations that are managed in DP World. Each employee is responsible for ensuring their safety, the safety of others and the safety of the environment.

We work to develop a special system for health, safety and the environment, which meets all the standards and regulations at the local and international level.

As a senior officer in the health, safety and environment department, our responsibility is to carry out field work, where we carry out routine inspections of all power stations, as well as the equipment used, to ensure that it meets all the quality requirements.

We also make sure that all employees are included in the necessary training programs, including occupational safety programs. A database is also formed, through which all the records related to the development programmes are documented.

I feel very proud to be part of an institution that supports youth efforts and works to empower women by giving them opportunities to develop their skills to positively impact society.”